The inaugural Chuy's cruise brought out an interesting collection of automobiles on a bright but gusty February Saturday morning. The cruise, relocated to Chuy's from Burger King at I40, displayed a varied array of rods, customs and classics. Some were Route 66 Cruisers, some were Relics and some were Over the Hill, but they all found common areas of discussion.

The ever popular Share-the-Wealth tickets are displayed by Dave Hero, left, as Terri Harris puts the hard sell on Wally Miller. Terri didn't realize that Wally has at least as good a winning record as she does in the raffle and door prize department. One of the tickets being displayed garnered the 40% split for Wally, who won the game of one-upsmanship, since the Harrises could only pull down the 10% cut.

And just what is it about red cars? They fly in from all over town, then flock together in some arcane pecking order that only they understand. Except for one red T-Bird, perhaps, below. It must have flown in late and couldn't squeeze in with the rest of the flock.

So, all the cruisers were just parked and lookin' good, when came the sound of a crash on Hwy 95 right in front. The cruisers were such eye candy that some rubber-necker going by didn't notice the sudden flash of brake lights. Oops! Nothing hurt but three cars and some feelings, but traffic backed up out of sight.

We can't guarantee this kind of excitement for every Chuy's cruise, but

The Big Boy sign had what, where when and why, four of the five necessary ingredients for a story opening..... The only thing missing was the who, the Havasu Classics, and they weren't in Whoville. They were out in force in support of a windy but sunny afternoon cruise.

The Classics had promised more parking for this popular outing, and more was found despite some nameless Wal-Mart workers pulling down and moving the yellow tape in the wee hours of the morning, thus preventing some excellent cruisers from joining in. According to the Classics Bob Thompson, there were nearly 115 cars that got parked and a myriad more that just passed by or through when all the parking was full.

There were flames in assorted colors and shapes, and a cruiser from the days when even the trucks had trunks. The overall winner of the slow drags across the parking lot was the Yellow Fever car, which turned an 11.02. Pretty respectable considering all of the pedestrian traffic. All of the participants cars were unique and beautiful, but a yellow Willys was just exceptional.

The modified 50/50 split left OSNCA President Karl Ecker holding some cash. The Big Boy twofer combo burgers were hot sellers all afternoon and evening.
